Web 2.0 has led to an explosion of social media choices for employees, and a world of worry for compliance and ethics professionals. What do you do about employee use of these sites during the workday? What about after work? Who monitors what is being said about the company? And what about your organization's own use, since even professional associations like the HCCA and SCCE have presences on these sites? In this web conference we'll share the results of the SCCE's and HCCA's joint survey of compliance practices. We will then discuss the issue with in-house practitioners with direct experience in managing this still-evolving issue.
